

JAL Group Announces Double Daily Service on Tokyo = New York Route

TOKYO November 28, 2013: JAL Group (JAL) announced today that it will increase flight frequency on its Tokyo (Narita) = New York (JFK) route from 7 weekly roundtrip flights to 14 weekly roundtrip flights, starting March 30, 2014.

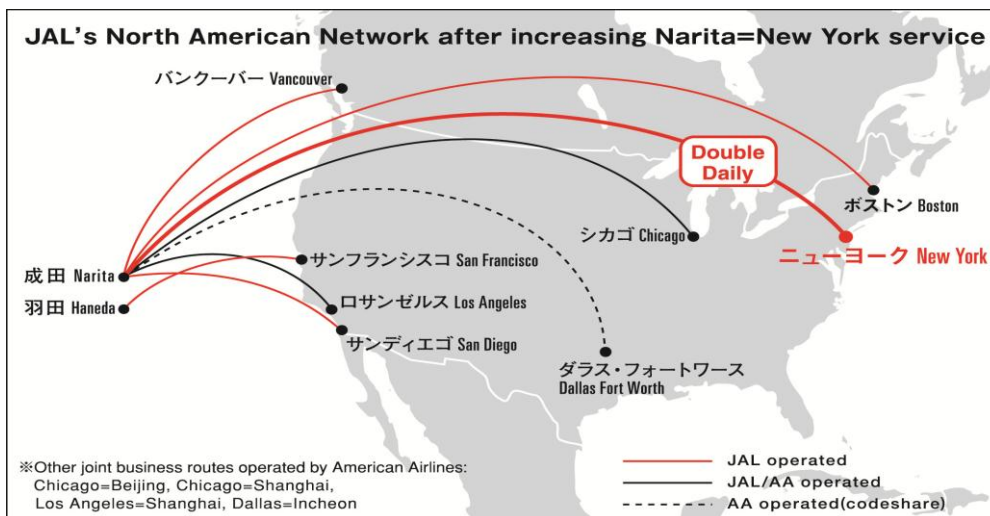

The second daily flight from Tokyo (Narita) to New York (JFK) will depart Narita in the evening, and the return flight from New York will depart in the morning to provide customers with more travel options and convenience. Additionally, the new service will offer improved accessibility to and from South America, where demand for air travel is robustly growing. JAL's newest service will also significantly shorten transit times via New York for customers traveling to/from South America.

Accessibility to and from cities throughout Asia via Tokyo (Narita) will also greatly improve with the number of same-day connections increasing from six cities*1 to 12 cities*2. Transit times at Tokyo (Narita) will also be further improved for passengers connecting from Asia to North America.

JAL is looking forward to implementing this newest service into its North America network.

*1 Singapore, Hanoi, Ho Chi Minh City, Bangkok, Seoul and Busan

*2 In addition to above cities, Manila, Beijing, Shanghai, Hong Kong, Taipei and Kaohsiung
